[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] New York, January 23.—Florencie Constantino, the Spanish grand oper tenor, has won the breach of promise action for $100,000 damages brought against him by Marcelle Hontabot, the diminutive chorus girl. A jury in the Supreme Court decided to-day that Constantino never promised to marry

Alss Hontabot had told the Jury how she met the tenor in a Boston street, and how he had promised to make her an artist, "and the wife of the great Constantino." She was followed by the defendant, who testified that he never mentioned marriage to her.

"She accosted me in the street one day," he explained, "and said she had known by he leads and the had become the leads of the street one day."

known me in Parls, and that she want-ed to go to the opera and hear me sing, I gave her tickets. I almost always give away fifty tickets to friends who want to hear me sing."

Miss Hontabot's lawyer wanted to know if the tenor was not in love with Alice Nelsen and Alicia del Pina. He admitted that he knew of these singers, but denied emphatically that he was ever in love with either of them. "It happens in the life of a great artist," he said, "that many prima donnas imagine that a great artist is in love with them, and they deluge him with photographs." Constantino admitted that he gave the plaintiff money on several occa-sions to help her. He couldn't remem-ber whether he had told her he was married. He said his wife now lives in Bilbao, and he visits her about once a year.

The tenor was much pleased with the verdict. He left to-night for
